Dear Jack,

How are you? I had a great time with your family during my homestay in New York. My school is going to have a speech contest next month. I am one of the speakers, so I am working hard. The title of my speech is "The difference between American and Japanese culture". In America, I said "sorry" when you gave me a present. In Japanese, "sumimasen" (sorry) can also mean "thank you". You told me that in America, you don't say sorry when someone does nice things for you. I realized the differences in our cultures and started to think more about them. Please tell your family a big "thank you"! I'll write to you soon. See you!

Your friend, Taku

(注) speaker: 発表者 realize :気付く

- (1) Who is Jack?

- 1 Taku's teacher.
- 2 Taku's student.
- 3 Taku's classmate.
- 4 A member of Taku's host family.

- (2) What will Taku do next month?

- 1 He will visit Jack in America.
- 2 He will go to Jack's school.
- 3 He will make a speech.
- 4 He will do nice things.

- (3) What do people say when they get a present in America?

- 1 "Sumimasen".
- 2 Thank you.
- 3 Have a good time!
- 4 See you.

Mike's Part-Time Job

Mike's grandfather works in Toronto. It is June now. His family came to Toronto last month. They'll stay here for two years.

Mike became friends with Sally and Jackie. When they came to Mike's house, they told him something interesting. They work part-time after school. Sally does a baby-sitting. Jackie sells soft drinks in the *soccer stadium. They talked about their part-time jobs.

In Canada, many boys and girls have these kinds of job. Mike started a part-time job with Jackie, too. When Mike and Jackie sell soft drinks, they walk around in the soccer stadium during the game.

They work after school. In the morning, of course, they work hard in school.

Mike and Jackie now like this job, because they can work together and can save money for their trip to California during summer vacation.
